Scoutmaster nabbed in child porno case

By JULIE MORRIS
Staff Writer

A man charged with using teen-age and pre-teen boys to film homemade pornographic movies is a Boy Scout scoutmaster who, for the past seven years has been a leader of a scout troop sponsored by a Northeast Dallas elementary school PTA.

Richard J. Lundy, 35, an insurance company computer operator described by neighbors as "a nice man" whose main hobby was scouting, was arrested Tuesday night at his apartment, where police said they found a footlocker crammed with amateur pornographic photographs, slides and at least three movies.

Vice squad investigators said the material included films of Lundy engaged in sexual activity with six to 10 different boys, aged from about 10 to 16, and still photographs of other youths posing nude, including one of a 13-year-old who has given police an affidavit describing activities in the apartment.

Lundy, a bearded and reserved bachelor who lived alone in the apartment at 9505 Royal Lane, has been scoutmaster of Troop 456 of the Boy Scouts' Dallas North Trails district for the past four years and was assistant scoutmaster of the troop for three years prior to that.

Tom Scott, chairman of a parents' committee that supervises the 21-member troop sponsored by the PTA at Skyview Elementary School, said Wednesday no one involved in the scout troop was aware of Lundy's alleged activities.

"The total reaction of the troop, the boys and the parents was complete and total surprise," Scott said. "He was a very qualified Scoutmaster from the standpoint of skills and was very good with the boys in the area of training."

Scott said the parents' committee voted Wednesday to remove Lundy from his scoutmaster post because of his arrest, and he said parents of the scouts have discussed the matter with them and are convinced that none of the troop members was involved in any sexual activity with Lundy.

Scott said Lundy, whom he described as "a career scouter," contacted the troop when he moved to the Royal Lane-Abrams area seven years ago and said he wanted to help out because he had been involved with scout troops everywhere else he had lived, including when he was stationed in Guam while in the military.

Dallas Police vice squad Lt. E. R. Walt said police do not know how the youths in the pornographic productions were contacted. He said the films apparently were done only for private use and were not being marketed or sold.

Asked if police believe the scout troop might have been a connection, Walt said, "We don't know."

Police first began looking into Lundy's activities two weeks ago when two youths told a juvenile officer they had been invited to Lundy's apartment to watch soft-core pornographic films — the type sold in adult bookstores.

After his arrest, Lundy was charged with a misdemeanor of displaying pornographic material to minors and with the felony crime of sexual performance by a child. He was released on $10,000 bond.

Walt said the pornographic material, "thousands of pictures," seems to feature the same youths again and again and that police are in the process of identifying them for questioning.

William C. Gamble, scout executive of Dallas's Circle Ten scouting council, said he was told last week by vice squad officers that Lundy was under investigation, but he did not learn of the arrest until he read news accounts of it.

Gamble said police have "told me there is no evidence at this time that the troop was involved (in sexual activities)" and he said the scout council would support the removal of Lundy.

Lundy's nextdoor neighbor, Elaine McNally, said Lundy frequently hosted young boys in his apartment, talked often about his scout troop and decorated the sparsely furnished apartment with scouting souvenirs, including a large wooden paddle saved from one canoe trip.

Lundy has lived in the $290-a-month one bedroom unit with fireplace and loft for four years, Miss McNally said, and she met many of the boys who visited.

"A lot of them were older boys, 17 or 18, who said they'd been in his scout troop," she said. "There were kids stopping about twice a week."

Miss McNally said Lundy, who has worked since 1972 for United States Life Insurance Co., never talked to her about his family, his job or where he came from, but read a great deal, lifted weights and played tennis.

Police, who were armed with a search warrant when they arrested Lundy Tuesday as he stepped out of his battered orange Volkswagen bus, found an 8mm movie camera, a 35mm still camera and a movie projector in the apartment.

Police said they also found a large amount of commercially produced soft-core pornography in the footlocker in a closet.

Man arrested in porn case dropped as scout leader

BY C. BOUNDS

A Dallas man arrested Tuesday after police confiscated films of teen-age boys in homosexual acts was dismissed as a Boy Scout troop leader Wednesday, although police have turned up no evidence that the acts were related to his scout activities.

James Lundy, 35, was arrested at 9505 Royal Lane about 5 p.m. Tuesday. Police were tipped that several boys had been lured to the apartment in recent weeks on promises of being paid for pornography.

Idy Walt, a Dallas police vice controller, said "five or six" young boys — one of whom appeared to be about 10 years old — were filmed as they participated in homosexual acts. A 13-year-old depicted in the movie whose family lives in the nearby area and had known Lundy for two years was questioned Wednesday. Police tentatively have identified several other young boys in the films, Walt said.

None of the boys identified were members of the Boy Scout troop led by Lundy, Walt said.

"The boy we questioned today was not connected with the scout troop," Walt said. "To date we have not interviewed anyone who was connected to this that was involved in the scout troop, but that's not to say there might not have been."

Billy Gamble, scout executive of the Circle 10 Council, said he had talked with several parents after Lundy's arrest and found "the man did not exploit the scout troop or the boys as far as we can see. It seemed to be something he did outside the program."

"One of the things that makes us feel more comfortable is that there was a lot of volunteer support from parents within the troop," Gamble said. "Fathers went along on the camping trips and also attended scout meetings. So it wasn't like he ran a 1-man show."

Lundy headed the 21-member scout troop, comprised of boys 11 to 15 years of age, for about four years, Gamble said. Lundy was removed as scoutmaster of the troop Wednesday by a committee that oversees the troop, Gamble said.

Walt described the films as "very graphic" and said Lundy was shown in some of the films engaging in homosexual acts with the boys. Although five or six boys were shown in the films, Lundy "could possibly have been involved in any number of such acts," Walt said.

Police also confiscated from Lundy's apartment several homosexual publications, clothing police said was used in the films and a handwritten ledger detailing erotic experiences while on a camping trip with young boys. Police said they are uncertain if Lundy actually was involved in the experiences he described.

Lundy, who told police he "worked with computers," has been charged with sexual performance with a child. Although he was questioned in connection with the abduction-slaying of 7-year-old Stephen Craig Little, "nothing of significance" resulted from the questioning, said Truly Holmes, a police homicide investigator.

Walt said Lundy's arrest caught the scout leader's acquaintances by surprise.

"They said he was not quite normal, but there was nothing to indicate this sort of thing," Walt said. "He was very friendly to children, they said. They said he was the kind who took a real interest in boys."

CONF009580

Dallas man arrested in child porno case

Dallas vice squad officers have arrested a 35-year-old man and charged him with sexual performance by a child. A 12-year-old girl, Randy, said she was playing pornographic materials to him.

Richard James Landy, of 8505 Roy, was arrested at his apartment at about 6 p.m. Tuesday by officers who began investigating charges about two weeks ago.

Landy, who is married and lives in a two-story house, was arrested by investigators. Paul King, officers found a footlocker containing at least 200 color slides of juveniles wearing swimming suits, several adult magazines and commercial adult films.

King said they also found three briefcase movies of Landy having sex with five identifiable youngsters ranging in age from about 10 to 18 years old.

The kids looked like they were there because they wanted to be there, said King.

Landy first came under scrutiny about two weeks ago. Investigators said when the juveniles told them of two youths who had told him they had been invited by Landy and his apartment to watch pornographic films.

Vice squad said Landy and his wife, who is now a prostitute, and another family had never arrested before. Talking with investigators, Landy said he was a real police guy.

Walt also said the youths had three home movies, and at least one from a movie class. Landy said he had three home movies, and at least one from a movie class.

An effort will be made to identify the five youths, Landy said, and they will testify against Landy. Landy's charges could be filed.
